Treating Adolescents: There is Always a Mother

Distinct from psychoanalysis with adults, clinical work with teens has specific pitfalls and predictable resistances. Defining typical adolescent behaviors, examining current neuroscience findings about the developing teenage brain and its concomitant relationship to seemingly maladaptive behavior, and presenting clinical examples of the crucial inclusion of parents, specifically the patient's mother, in the treatment, Dr D'Amato hopes to outline a general framework in which to understand and treat adolescents.

Don Giovanni or the Penis in Unrest:

■ A Multi-Media Opera Lecture ■

Don Giovanni, protagonist of Mozart's opera by the same name, is the anti-hero, the debaucher, and the libertine, whose unremitting hypersexual behavior courts his own destruction yet never is satisfied. Has his search for sexual indulgence become an obligation? Does Don Giovanni suffer from a narcissistic personality disorder, or is he a mirror of our unleashed selves, the id unrestrained? We will explore these questions using multi media.

FRIDAY. MARCH 7th 7:30-9:30 PM

JASMIN BEY COWIN, PhD, lives in NYC where she is an active free-lance harpist and adjunct professor at Teachers College, Columbia University. Dr. Cowin lectures extensively on the history of opera and music for many prestigious institutions. www.operalectures.com

Gallery Talk

FRIDAY. APRIL 4th 7:30-9:30 PM

The Living Museum is the first successful model of an Art Asylum in the US where patients thrive as artists in a self-run creative environment. Many have spent decades, if not their entire adult lives, in hospital settings. For nearly 30 years, the Living Museum has opened its doors to many such patients from the wards of Creedmoor. This talk introduces the audience to an extraordinary world, mostly unknown to the public.

Continuing Education Series

Before Analysis Can Begin: Treating Pre-Analytic Patients

Patients often enter treatment with real problems but little if any interest in free-associating. They seek relief from their psychic suffering but for some, years may pass before they become curious and strong enough to explore their unconscious for the underlying motivations of their behaviors. In this seminar we will explore what helps pre-analytic patients to stay in treatment and begin a psychoanalysis.

SUNDAY. APRIL 27th NOON-2:00 PM

CLAUDIA LUIZ, PsyD, is the winner of the 2008 Phyllis W. Meadow Award for Excellence in Psychoanalytic Writing. She treats individuals and families and is the author of 'Where's My Sanity? Stories That Help.'

Computers and Psychoanalysis

FRIDAY. MAY 16th 7:30-9:30 PM

If the main focus of analysts is the unconscious, then the idea that there is a correct, objectively verifiable interpretation tends to close down analysts' ability to allow their unconscious to speak to them. Mr Katz's proposes to open analysts to their unconscious, using a computer program, based on Freud's works, developed for his Master's thesis

JAMIE KATZ, MA, a freelance computer programmer, consulting in the field for 20 years, received his MA from NYGSP. His master's thesis, "Computers and Psychoanalysis," is the basis for this talk. Katz is currently a CMPS certificate candidate.
