Social Workers and the Couch Is Psychoanalytic Training for You?

Join us for lunch and an exploration of the ways that modern psychoanalytic training can expand and strengthen your clinical insights and supervisory skills. We will discuss any questions you may have about psychoanalytic training and the challenges involved so that you can come to a better understanding about whether this may be a path you want to follow. Attendees will receive a complimentary lunch.

Mimi Crowell, PhD, President of the Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies (CMPPS) and Program Director of the New York Graduate School of Psychoanalysis (NYGSP) will be joined by Sybil Schacht, LCSW, Hunter College School of Social Work, and Jennifer Lieber, LCSW, New York University School of Social Work. Both are members of the modern psychoanalytic community.

Modern Psychoanalysis is a coherent treatment approach to working with the full range of emotional disorders. It rests on the theoretical framework and clinical approach of Sigmund Freud and the innovative techniques of Hyman Spotnitz and Phyllis W. Meadow. Its cornerstone is emotional communication, the practice of which loosens repetitive and rigid patterns of thinking and behavior allowing for growth and maturation. This technique along with others has revolutionized the psychoanalytic field and has proven valuable to those working in social work, mental health, education, the law, business, and the arts.

The Center for Modern Psychoanalytic Studies holds an absolute charter from the State of New York to offer a Certificate in Psychoanalysis and is recognized by the State of New York as a licensure-qualifying institute for those seeking licensure in psychoanalysis.
