Free Speech, Hate Speech: Can Talking Cure?

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 16 • 7:30–9:30 PM

2 CE credits for Social Workers and Psychologists

As globalization and metastasizing conflicts drive us into ever closer encounters with the Other, a siege mentality spreads. Those who represent the public voice—politicians, professional and “citizen” journalists, pundits, and academics – respond to real and imagined violence with conflicted reappraisals of free speech and its limits, especially “hate speech.” Where on this intellectual battleground do we find psychoanalysis? How can psychoanalysts, practitioners of the talking cure, enter the discourse? Does our clinical experience give us special insight into the nature of freedom? In a polarized era, perhaps psychoanalysts have the tools to open a space for genuine encounter across ideological divides.

Jill Gentile, PhD, a clinical psychologist and psychoanalyst, maintains private clinical practices in Highland Park, New Jersey, and New York City. She is on the faculty of the Postdoctoral Program in Psychoanalysis at NYU. She coauthored, with M. Macrone, Feminine Law: Freud, Free Speech, and the Voice of Desire.

Soul Machine: The Invention of the Modern Mind

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 13 • 7:30–9:30 PM

2 CE credits for Social Workers and Psychologists

Dr. George Makari will discuss his new book, Soul Machine: The Invention of the Modern Mind. The book takes us back to the origins of modernity, a time when a crisis in religious authority and the scientific revolution led to searching questions about the nature of the inner life of people. Makari will review his study of how a new concept—the mind—emerged as a potential solution, one that was part soul and part machine, but fully neither. He will show how writers, philosophers, physicians, and anatomists worked to construct notions of the mind, not as an ethereal thing, but a natural one. In short, he will describe how Soul Machine gives a new account of the making of the Western mind.

George J. Makari, MD, is the director of Cornell's DeWitt Wallace Institute for the History of Psychiatry, a professor of psychiatry at Weill Medical College, and an adjunct professor at Rockefeller University and Columbia University's Psychoanalytic Center. Dr. Makari is the author of Revolution in Mind: The Creation of Psychoanalysis, which was published in 2008 to wide acclaim. His most recent work, Soul Machine: The Invention of the Modern Mind, was called “brilliant” and “essential reading” by the Wall Street Journal.

The Psychoanalysis of Madness: A Fight Against Perversion

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 26 • 1:00–3:00 PM

2 CE credits for Social Workers and Psychologists

Françoise Davoine has published two books on Don Quixote and the psychoanalysis of madness. She views this “greatest of all novels” as Cervantes’ attempt to find his way out of madness with his “son,” Don Quixote, as his guide. He has been a guide for Davoine as well in her own work with madness and trauma. Her first book on Don Quixote addressed the fight against melancholia; the second, the fight against perversion. Focusing on the second and using clinical examples, she will discuss the psychoanalysis of madness and trauma—a fight against perversion, enacted in the transference.

Françoise Davoine, PhD, worked for thirty years as a psychoanalyst in public psychiatric hospitals in France, and is currently in private practice. She was a professor at the Center for the Study of Social Movements of the Ecole des Hautes Etudes en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) in Paris, and is the author of many articles and books, including Wittgenstein’s Folly, Mother Folly, and History Beyond Trauma (with Jean-Max Gaudillière).

Holding, Humor, and Shame: Some New Ideas About an Old One

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2 • 7:30–9:30 PM

2 CE credits for Social Workers and Psychologists

When does Winnicott’s concept of holding fit within a contemporary relational frame? Can we invoke a parental metaphor without thinning the work we do? If so, what is holding’s underlying therapeutic function? Reviewing the evolution of the parental metaphor and its current place in our thinking, Slochower theorizes about holding’s dynamic function. A case example illustrates the use of humor within the holding space and the mutative impact of holding in work with acute underlying shame states.

Joyce Slochower, PhD, APBB, is a professor of psychology at Hunter College and the Graduate Center, CUNY, and is on the faculty of the NYU Postdoctoral Program, the Steven Mitchell Center, the National Training Program of NIP, the Philadelphia Center for Relational Studies, and PINC in San Francisco. She is the author of Holding and Psychoanalysis: A Relational Perspective (1996 & 2014) and Psychoanalytic Collisions (2006 & 2014), and is in private practice in New York City.

Continuing Education Workshop

Modern Psychoanalytic Approaches to Compulsive Gambling

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 2 • 10:00 AM–12 NOON • $40

2 CE Credits for Social Workers, Psychologists, and CASACs

This workshop will focus on gambling as an expression of narcissistic pathology rooted in the preverbal period of development. We will explore the conditions necessary for gambling addiction to occur and what our clients or loved ones may be communicating via their addictive and compulsive behaviors. Topics to be addressed include the etiology of pathological gambling, character traits of the pathological gambler, how to assess the different stages of compulsive gambling, and age and gender differences in compulsive gambling behaviors. This workshop is designed for mental health practitioners and addiction counselors with an intermediate knowledge of psychoanalytic theory and addiction.

Raul A. Plasencia, LCSW, is a graduate of NYU School of Social Work and CMPS. He has over 20 years’ experience in the fields of mental health and addictions, specializing in compulsive and anxiety disorders. He is a practicing psychoanalyst in Hoboken, NJ, and NYC.
