Contemporary Psychoanalytic Field Theory: Analytic Listening and the Use of the Analyst's Mind

Montana Katz will describe the motivation for the development of psychoanalytic field theory as well as the various psychoanalytic field theory models that have been developed in different contexts and parts of the world. She will explore whether and how psychoanalytic field theory models offer something new and useful to the theory and practice of psychoanalysis and other clinical modalities. She will also compare various modes of analytic listening described in psychoanalytic field theory. Clinical examples will be used throughout to vividly distinguish different approaches to therapeutic situations.
